A theoretical analysis of Bitter-pattern evolution

U. Hartmann

A theoretical analysis of the bitter-pattern evolution has been formulated basing on a non-interacting particle behaviour. The results permit an estimation of the observed optical contrast produced by the microfield distribution of Bloch walls. Additionally, the information transference concerning the wall width or the fine structure of the walls is discussed.